USDA ANNOUNCES NEW ORGANICS INITIATIVE $308,000 in funding available to Massachusetts farmers

AMHERST, Mass. (May 8, 2009) — Local organic farmers and those in transition to organic production can sign-up for technical and financial assistance under a new federal initiative administered by the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). More than $308,000 in funding is available in Massachusetts through NRCS's Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP).

Under the Organic Initiative, participants will receive help implementing conservation practices. A set of six core practices are being emphasized with higher payment rates, including: conservation crop rotation, cover crop, nutrient management, pest management, prescribed grazing, and forage harvest management. NRCS will also assist with other conservation practices that address site-specific natural resource concerns. Initiative rules limit the amount of funding a participant may receive to $20,000 per year or $80,000 over six years.

The sign-up period for this special initiative is now through May 29th. Farmers should contact their local USDA Service Center to determine eligibility. USDA service center locations are listed on-line at <http://offices.usda.gov> or in the phone book under Federal Government, U.S. Department of Agriculture. General program information is available on the NRCS Massachusetts website at www.ma.nrcs.usda.gov.

The 2009 Organic Initiative is a nationwide special initiative to provide financial assistance to National Organic Program (NOP) certified organic producers as well as producers in the process of transitioning to organic production. Those applying for this special funding will be competing only among other organic/transitioning farmers. The objective of this initiative is to make EQIP assistance more available, appropriate and accessible to organic food producers. Organic producers may also apply and compete for funding under the general EQIP program where the payment limitation is $350,000 over six years.

"The EQIP Organic Initiative is designed to meet the Administration's promise to encourage more organic agriculture production," said Christine Clarke, NRCS State Conservationist for Massachusetts.

EQIP is a voluntary program that helps farmers and forest landowners address water quality, water conservation, invasive species control, soil quality, erosion control, nutrient and pest management, residue management, irrigation efficiency, energy conservation, air quality and other natural resource concerns.

NRCS offices in Greenfield, Hadley, Holden, Hyannis, Pittsfield, Westford, and West Wareham work with local conservation districts and other partners to serve farmers and landowners throughout the commonwealth.
